Subject: Overnight parking restrictions in Chinatown

Dave,

I learned from bringing up the subject in the Salinas Downtown Community Board meeting yesterday evening that there is a concern on behalf of most of the members that by restricting the overnight parking on Bridge and Lake Streets, undesired parking and undesired activity will be pushed to California St. No one is in favor of that consequence.

Instead, it's been suggested that those areas, plus Soledad Street, be restricted to parking by permit only. Apparently, this has been done successfully in other neighborhoods, residential neighborhoods, with one in particular on Romie Lane being used as an example.

Has that alternative been discussed?

Jill

From the Australian Bureau of Statistics' definition of "homelessness". The ABS definition of homelessness is informed by an understanding of homelessness as 'home'lessness, not rooflessness. It emphasises the core elements of 'home' in Anglo American and European interpretations of the meaning of home as identified in* research evidence (Mallett, 2004). These elements may include: a sense of security, stability, privacy, safety, and the ability to control living space. Homelessness is therefore a lack of one or more of the elements that represent 'home'.
